FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Selfridge Air Force Base*

BY COL. JAMES R. GUNN, JR., USAF
Commanding

SELFLEDGE Air Force Base, home station of the 56th Fighter-Interceptor Wing, the 30th Air Division and Tenth Air Force Headquarters, is alert and ready at a critical position of our national defense system.

Col. Gunn

Located on the northern border, the mitten-shaped area of Michigan could be a tempting target for the strategical planners of potential enemies. With the key cities of Detroit and Chicago at the termination of long water corridors, the possibilities of unobserved low level approaches to such worthwhile targets must be considered.
The locks of Sault Ste Marie are equal in importance to the Panama Canal in time of emergency because of the dependency of the steel and automotive industries on lake carrier iron ore. The state is a tempting target for many reasons in the book of strategy when one considers the magnitude of the blow to United States population, production, transportation, food supply, and economy if Detroit and Chicago were lost in a sneak two-pronged attack.

Fortunately, the Air Defense Command under Lt. Gen. Ennis Whitehead and the Eastern Air Defense Force, commanded by Maj. Gen. Frederic Smith, jr., have not overlooked or underestimated Michigan's critical position. The air defense of this vital area has been assigned to the 56th Fighter-Interceptor Wing and the 30th Air Division and both organizations have been equipped with the best equipment obtainable.

Such an assignment calls for the ultimate in training procedure because the United States is vulnerable for the first time in history to an air attack. New equipment and tactical maneuvers must constantly be tested under simulated combat conditions. Pilots must be trained as close to perfection as possible in bad weather and night flying. Working with the Ground Controlled Intercept specialists, the 56th Fighter-Interceptor Wing must be ready to assemble in the shortest possible time to seek out and destroy an invading force under any conditions. Such specialized training is in addition to routine proficiency in flying and gunnery.

It is with this mission and responsibility

Admiral Robert B. Carney, USN, left, was named this week by General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower to command SHAPE forces in Southern Europe, with Maj.
Gen. David M. Schlatter, USAF, center, as his air deputy. An Army general was also given a new post this week, as Maj. Gen. William E. Bergin, USA, right, was nominated by President Truman to be The Adjutant General.

Army Promotes 1048 To Major and Lt. Col.

(Names of Lt. Cols.; Maj. on Page 1205)

The Army's 1951 temporary promotion program was launched this week with announcement of a total of 1,048 advancements to major and lieutenant colonel.

These promotions represent the first increment of officer advancements made necessary by the expansion program and are expected to be followed shortly by release of initial lists of officers named for promotion to the temporary ranks of colonel and captain.

It is recalled that the 1950 temporary promotion program, which saw a total of 15,593 Regular and non-Regular line officers receive higher grades, was made in three phases for most ranks.

Similarly, Army officials emphasize that 1951 temporary promotions are to be announced in increments.

Here is the break-down on the temporary promotions to major and lieutenant colonel, released this week:

To Major:—On the Army Promotion List, 499 officers are included on the initial list, of whom 113 are Regulars and 386 are non-Regulars. The cut-off date of rank for both Regulars and non-Regulars was 23 May 1944. Also, 28 Judge Advocate General's Corps officers were named for advancement to temporary major—10 of them Regulars and 18, non-Regulars. The JAGC cut-off date was 31 Dec.
1947.

To Lieutenant Colonel:—Just as on the first list of promotions to temporary major, 499 line officers were named for advancement to temporary lieutenant colonel—290 of them Regulars and 209 non-Regulars. The Army Promotion List cut-off date was 9 March 1944. Additionally, 22 JAGC officers were selected for temporary lieutenant colonel—16 Regulars and 6 non-Regulars, with 18 May 1944 the cut-off date.

Air Force Projects Lead Construction

Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall this week submitted to Congress a $6,561,262,387 unified military public works construction authorization bill and stated that in the near future actual funds will be asked for $4.5 billion to speed Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps projects in the United States and overseas.

Of the $6.5 billion total authorization sought, the Air Force would be granted $3.58 billion; Army, $1.83 billion, and Navy and Marine Corps, $1.145 billion.

Included in this overall today is $25 million for Air Force welfare and morale facilities, $15 million for similar Army construction and $5 million for Navy and Marine Corps welfare and morale projects.

Secretary Marshall stated that the purpose of this legislation is "to construct military public works urgently needed by the Department of Defense to meet its requirements under the expanding military program which has been dictated by the current international situation." In each of his letters, the Secretary expressed an earnest hope that the Congress will enact the measure "as expeditiously as possible."

Based on the operational and logistical requirements for an Armed Force strength of 3,500,000 men, the legislation has been subjected to critical reviews by each of the three military departments including reviews by panels on which eminent civilian advisors served. Additional reviews were given the proposed legislation by the Office of the Secretary of Defense and by the Bureau of the Budget. The purpose of each of these reviews was to make certain that the requested authorization reflected only essential requirements.

Medical & Eng. Plans Rejected by Depts.

With the approval of President Truman, the Bureau of the Budget and the Department of Defense this week advised the Senate Committee on Expenditures that they are opposed to the enactment of the bill to transfer Service hospitals to a proposed civilian Department of Health.

Likewise, the Department of the Army has told Congress that it is opposed to the bills to transfer the civil functions of the Corps of Engineers to the Department of the Interior.

These proposals originated in the Hoover Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government and have since been sponsored and pressed vigorously by the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report.

Dan A. Kimball, Acting Secretary of the Navy, submitted a report on behalf of the Department of Defense. In it he declared that "it is not conceivable that a medical logistic support system operating under civil direction and control with 'borrowed' personnel could efficiently meet the criteria without serious, if not chaotic, disruption of essential services under mobilization conditions and loss of service efficiency through the forced utilization of personnel lacking in training, indoctrination and 'esprit de corps' so necessary in a military organization."

Frederick J. Lawton, Director of the Bureau of the Budget, also pointed out that "the quality of military medical service would suffer and the Armed Forces would find it more difficult to attract and hold competent and experienced medical personnel."

The measure also was opposed by the Federal Security Agency, the Veterans' Agency, and the Governor of the Panama Canal.

Concerning the Corps of Engineers bill, Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., advised the House Committee on Public Lands that "the evidence presented clearly demonstrates that the proposed transfer of the operational responsibilities for civil works of the Corps of Engineers to the Secretary of the Interior or to any civil agency would be detrimental to the National Defense."

In his letter of opposition to the hospital bill, Acting Secretary of the Navy Kimball said:

"One of the most attractive inducements for a career in the armed services at present is the high caliber of the medical attention which has been afforded. To the man who is in a combat zone in time of war, the knowledge that proper medical care is available is one of the strongest supports to his moral and physical courage. The bill would seriously affect the incentive or desire of doctors, dentists and nurses for a career in the armed services. It would be difficult for them to consider themselves part of the armed services inasmuch as the vast majority of them would be on duty with the Department of Health and under the supervision and control of an administrative

Washington, D. C., Post—"The attack on Secretary Marshall revealed a foulness that must be hard even for the strongest Republican stomachs to digest. The party is now at a point where it must unequivocally disavow McCarthyism—or be convicted of indorsing it."

Christian Science Monitor—"The Nation's estimate of George C. Marshall ultimately will be built of the whole record of his public service in its entirety, the time-tested integrity of his character, and the extraordinary respect and confidence which has been accorded him by so many men of real stature in both parties. Like other public men, he has made his mistakes. . . . Is Senator McCarthy helping to clear the air and to unify the American people against their common enemy, Russian communistic imperialism? Or is he doing that which sows suspicion, undermines confidence, and sets good Americans against each other while the Kremlin looks on and laughs?"

Washington, D. C., Evening Star—"Senator McCarthy has not quite said in so many words that General Marshall is a traitor to his country. Even with the immunity which he enjoys on the Senate floor, and which he has used to blacken so many reputations, he did not go that far. What he did say was that General Marshall has been associated with a conspiracy to weaken the United States to the end that it shall finally fall victim to Soviet intrigue from within and Russian military might from without. . . . It is impossible to believe, however, that this attempt to destroy General Marshall with the big-lie technique will succeed. Some Americans have swallowed a lot of Senator McCarthy's rantings. But this is too big a dose for anyone in his right mind to swallow."

New York Herald Tribune—"There may be others who question the wisdom of some of General Marshall's acts in China, in the State Department or in the Pentagon. But it seems impossible that any will be deluded by Senator McCarthy's huge compilation of words. General Marshall has never pretended to be sacrosanct, or immune to criticism; he has accepted much of it patiently, during his long career. There is a kind of attack, however, which shows the attacker in a worse light than the intended victim. In method and in manner, Mr. McCarthy has again been guilty of this kind of offense against good taste and good sense."

THE WAR IN KOREA

THE war in Korea this week was highlighted by aggressive Red air operations, during which air combats occurred almost daily and resulted in the destruction or damage to a considerable number of enemy planes.

On the ground there were prudent advances, up to five miles, by the Allies on all sections of the front. The enemy fought strong delaying actions, with occasional local counter-attacks, but continued to give ground slowly. In some cases well-organized defense positions on slopes of hills and ridge lines were abandoned by the Reds without a struggle. In the West Allied patrols entered Kaesong. The last enemy position south of the 38th parallel.

Chinese Communist reinforcements and considerable amounts of supplies continue to pour into North Korea from Manchuria, and Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, USA, warns that the enemy, despite extremely heavy losses, still has the capability of launching yet another offensive. Increased Red air activity indicates the probable arrival of additional planes from Russia, and suggests the possibility of the use of air to support ground troops in any future offensive operations.

However, most observers believe that recent enemy losses in personnel, equipment and supplies have been so great that it will be weeks, possibly months, before the Reds are in a position to mount a major offensive operation with any prospect of success. Nevertheless, an early limited enemy offensive may be possible, perhaps as soon as next week.

In air combat during the first four days of this week the enemy lost 24 planes destroyed or damaged, with at least 9 definitely destroyed. Most of the enemy planes knocked out of the air were MIG-15 jet fighters, but among those destroyed or damaged were several propeller-driven Russian-type Yaks and IL-2s. In some of the air encounters this week more than 100 planes were engaged.

Ground operations this week were largely confined to aggressive patrolling, and to sharp, but isolated engagements between advance Allied elements and enemy rear-guard units. In the former so-called Iron Triangle, bounded by the towns of Chorwon, Kumwha and Pyonggang, on the Central front, practically all enemy resistance ceased, and patrols north of the area encountered only light opposition. To the northeast and in the Inje area the enemy resistance stiffened.

On the western front little or no enemy contact was reported by friendly patrols as they entered Kaesong and advanced in the area north of Munsan and Korangpo-ri. Farther east enemy forces of undetermined strength were encountered by Allied units west and northwest of Yonchon.

In the Iron Triangle area in Central Korea light enemy resistance was encountered northeast of Chorwon. East and northeast of Kumwha enemy units from platoon to battalion size were observed. Light to moderate resistance was reported by patrols northwest of Hwachon.

Heavy enemy resistance was encountered northeast of Yanggu from units of battalion size. Near the east coast, just west of the North Korean port of Kan-

Year's War in Korea Tests Weapons and Tactics

THE war in Korea will be one year old next Monday 25 June. In that time many of the Korean cities and a large number of villages have been ruined and literally millions have been made homeless, but Red aggression has been at least temporarily halted, though the furious fighting continues.

As a year of fighting comes to a close, the Red invaders have been driven out of South Korea to positions well north of the 38th parallel, the crossing of which by the North Korean Communist forces began the war.

During the first few days of the conflict last June, the Red troops from North Korea, well-trained under Soviet direction, and armed with excellent Russian weapons, quickly overran light South Korean opposition, and captured the capital city of Seoul. Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Security Council of the United Nations the American government sent armed forces to aid the defense of South Korea.

At first this military assistance was limited to Naval and Air support of South Korean ground troops. It soon became apparent that if the resistance was to be effective, the use of American land troops would be essential. Units of the 24th Division were dispatched from Japan to Korea piece-meal as they became available. The Americans fought a series of successive delaying actions, which slowed, but did not stop the Red advance. During these operations the 24th Division lost its gallant commander, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, USA, who is still carried as missing in action.

Aggressors Supplied by USSR

At the outset the North Korean Reds had a small air force, and a considerable number of Russian-built tanks. American planes soon destroyed practically all of the enemy aircraft, but the enemy tanks gave considerable difficulty, until sufficient American artillery, armor and anti-tank weapons reached the front, after which the Reds lost tanks much faster than they could replace them.

During the first few weeks of the war, there was considerable question as to whether the North Korean advance could be checked, while the buildup of American and other United Nations troops in Korea was progressing. Our forces were compressed into a relatively small beachhead based on the excellent port of Pusan, at the southern tip of the Korean peninsula.

With considerable difficulty, the beachhead was successfully defended against repeated vicious assaults by the enemy. It was held by the American 1st Cavalry Division, the 24th and 25th Infantry Divisions, sent to Korea from Japan, reinforced by the 1st Marine Division and the 2d Army Division from the United States, as well as by several rehabilitated South Korean divisions. Later the Army 3d Division and units from various Allied countries joined the defenders. The land force was incorporated in the American Eighth Army, commanded by General Walton H. Walker, USA, who was later killed in a motor accident in Korea.

The American divisions from Japan were woefully under strength when the conflict started, and regimental combat teams were rushed from Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and continental United States for incorporation in these divisions. Still far below strength the additional manpower needs of the divisions were partially met by the integration of some 30,000 South Koreans into American units.

Blockade Korea

American and Allied warships established a tight sea blockade of the Korean peninsula, while carrier-based planes greatly increased the air strength in the battle area. In the air, American and Allied planes swept the enemy from the skies, harassed the supply lines of the advancing Reds, and provided close support for embattled ground troops.

The military situation was apparently in balance in mid-September, with Allied troops holding tenaciously to the Pusan beachhead, while the enemy retained the initiative and continued to attack. At this point a bold Allied maneuver suddenly changed the whole course of the war and bade fair to bring the conflict to a quick conclusion with a notable Allied victory. General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, then in command of the United Nations forces, decided on a daring amphibious landing on the extremely difficult mud beaches of Inchon, far behind the enemy lines, an operation that proved brilliantly successful.

The X Corps, commanded by Lt. Gen. Edward M. Almond, USA, which was composed of the 1st Marine Division, the 7th Army Division and supporting troops, stormed ashore and moved rapidly inland to capture Seoul. Concurrently, the Eighth Army began a major offensive, breaking through the enemy lines to link up with the Inchon force.

The North Korean Reds were scattered and defeated and thousands surrendered to the Allies. As our forces pressed into North Korea in pursuit of the disorganized and fleeing Communists the end of the war appeared to be only a matter of weeks. General MacArthur is reported to have said that American troops would be home for Christmas.

Another amphibious operation was planned for Wonsan on the east coast, by the same divisions that participated in the Inchon landings. However, extensive mine fields in Wonsan harbor delayed the landing for a week, and in the meantime the port was taken by South Korean troops.

American task forces, striking deep into enemy territory, reached the Yalu River boundary of North Korea in the east, and a similar force moved to within a few miles of that boundary on the west. November brought extremely cold weather, especially in east Central Korea, where the Marines and the soldiers of the 7th Division encountered sub-zero weather in the mountain passes, and suffered heavy casualties from frostbites.

Chinese Intervention

At this stage the Chinese Reds unexpectedly intervened in the Korean war. Hundreds of thousands of Chinese Communist troops swept into North Korea from Manchuria and overran elements of United Nations forces. In Northeast Korea overwhelming numbers of Chinese Reds attacked the exposed flanks of the 1st Marine Division and elements of the Army 7th Division. American troops, which were completely surrounded, sustained heavy casualties, both from enemy fire and from the bitter cold, but

THE EUROPEAN THEATER

IT has taken the North Atlantic Treaty Organization a long time to come to it, but on Monday General Eisenhower was at last able to announce the rounding out of his regional organization, by establishment of his Southern Sector under command of Admiral Robert B. Carney.

Besides the Sector command, (and of course his U. S. Naval responsibility as chief of our Mediterranean and Eastern Atlantic Forces) Admiral Carney will have the command of such Allied Naval Forces as are allocated to General Eisenhower in Southern Europe. The backbone of all those forces, of course, is the U. S. Naval force already under Admiral Carney—long ago assigned by the President to support General Eisenhower, but now performing that role by concurrence of the Standing Group of NATO. This was one of the substantial results of the recent European trip of General Omar N. Bradley in his role as American member of the Standing Group.

Under Admiral Carney, the command of ground forces in the Southern Sector, as forecast some time ago, is given to Gen. Maurizio de Lazzaro de Castiglioni of the Italian Army. The air command of the sector goes to Maj. Gen. David M. Schlatter of the U. S. Air Force, lately serving as Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Atomic Energy Operations.

It now is possible to push ahead with much more confidence in the organization of NATO's Western European defense, long delayed in the south by the political differences which blocked the setting up of the Mediterranean Area command, like that of the Atlantic Area command—both of which must be recognized as events of the very distant future. Possibly they can wait. General Eisenhower could not safely wait much longer. It is significant that his formal announcement of his Southern set-up was made on the very day after the French elections, over which Europe has been on tenterhooks for weeks—indeed it was made before the ballots were all counted, but after they were safely in the ballot boxes.

Admiral Carney has the Adriatic Sea but not Yugoslav waters, nor Malta, nor of course Greek, Turkish and Egyptian waters. He does not touch Spain or Gibraltar. Certainly an all-Mediterranean arrangement would be welcome, but such a command, whether for an American or a European admiral, would be contingent upon political agreements among the 12 NATO nations, which now seems remote. And if no decision is possible at present with regard to admission of Turkey and Greece, and with regard to operating controls in the eastern half of the Mediterranean, it at least is necessary to effect a military control over the middle and western Mediterranean waters, washing the shores of two NATO members. France will exercise authority over her coastal waters and also over communications between Toulon and France-in-Africa. But the formal designation of Admiral Carney as the Southern Sector's commander removes all doubt that General Eisenhower's right flank is at last securely organized, for defense, for communications, and for maintenance of that vigorous striking force which must be assured.

The French election is well out of the way, but any unwise hope that it would settle matters for a measurable time, as is the case with our own two-party elections, is in vain. Again in that politically mysterious land the Communists ran up the largest popular plurality (22.2 per cent, against 28.6 per cent five years ago) and, while this showed a loss, it does not alter the fact that Communism still drags a good deal in the way of a protest-vote, and remains a constant brake on government. DeGaulle's party of the extreme right stood next, with 18.5 per cent of the popular vote, and the further advantage of having the largest single party representation in the new Assembly. The "middle" parties, as a group, retain a majority but it is an unsteady one which can be upset any time one of those parties goes over to the opposition. That is what makes French governments unstable, which is the firm desire of the French voter, with his addiction to changing his mind when he feels like it. His sure method of attaining it is to maintain sixteen political parties instead of two.

Just how unstable any government can be in the new parliament is indicated by the fact that the six principal factions have a surprising near-equality of Assembly seats, thus (arranged from "left to right" in political doctrine): Communists 101, Socialists 104, Radical Socialists (who with Gallic imprecision are less radical than the Socialists) 95, Popular Republicans 86, Independents 99, Gaulists 117. Presumably the first attempt will be to form a government without Communists or Gaullists, and it may stand for a time. Somewhere in the future must be expected a government of the right and middle parties, despite the usually uncompromising attitude of DeGaulle himself. American veterans will be interested to know that by a last minute upset in the count Gen. Pierre Koenig won out; he is a determined Gaullist, as he was during World War II.

The end of France's political campaign, regardless of losses sustained by the old Popular Republican party which long had been dominant, is a profound relief. Whatever new government takes office in July can act with a great deal more boldness than Premier Queuille dared exhibit on political-military matters of prime importance—and incidentally, despite Gen. DeGaulle's sometimes imperious manner, he is a determined supporter of French rearmament. A little more boldness in decision will be welcomed by Gen. Eisenhower. We ought now to get quicker agreement on the raising of France's quota of divisions for Gen. Eisenhower's command, and on the matter of German rearmament as well—specifically with regard to a German 12-division program already supported by the Allied-German Military Committee.

There has been mention that even the Southern Sector's organization could not be announced before Sunday lest in some way it turn votes to Communism or to Gaullism. But it was this same sort of nervousness which prevented the Government from making known even a sentimental decision of 8 June until a few minutes after the polls were closed. This was the compassionate order whereby old Marshal Petain, now 95 and unable to move, will be allowed to die in a military hospital rather than in a prison. It probably will be, paradoxically, in the exact spot where he has been dying for years, for the ingenious French Government is simply saying that the prison on the island of Yeu (where Petain is the only prisoner of note) is no longer a prison but a hospital. Hence its inmate is not a prisoner but a patient. Petain had refused to ask pardon; his old-time fire had led him to say curtly that a Marshal of France asks pardon of nobody. A curious circumstance is that DeGaulle has been charging that the old man's incarceration was inhuman; DeGaulle himself had plenty of time to pardon him when he was provisional President, but did not do so.

Czechoslovakia has followed the Soviet satellites' standard procedure in holding two NATO aviators (an American and a Norwegian) whose direction-finders failed them when they were on a routine flight. They came down on Czech soil. Several days later the Czechs reported them safe—but kept both men and planes, the latter no doubt for examination of the F-84 jets and all attachments. Routine demand for the men's return has been made by the American and Norwegian diplomatic authorities in western Germany.

A Year of War

successfully fought their way through the enemy lines to the North Korean port of Hungnam, from which the X Corps and attached South Korean troops were successfully evacuated by sea.

On the western and central fronts, intense Red pressure forced a general retreat by the Eighth Army and the abandonment of Seoul and other strong positions. During this operation General Walker was killed in a jeep accident, and was succeeded as commander of the Eighth Army by General Matthew B. Ridgway.

For a time it appeared that the overwhelming numerical superiority of the enemy would drive United Nations forces from Korea, and plans for evacuating these troops were seriously considered. However, within a few weeks the resilient Allied forces struck back and forced the Reds to give ground. Seoul was retaken and North Korea was again invaded by our troops.

Fighting this Spring was marked by two abortive offensives by the Reds. The enemy attacked savagely and gained some ground, but suffered tremendous casualties. Later the Red gains were erased by Allied counter-attacks, and near the close of the first year of the war the Allies were well inside of North Korea, making their deepest penetration since last December.

With the intervention of Red China in the war hundreds of Russian-built MIG-15 jet fighter planes appeared on the Manchurian frontier. These planes are based in China and make only brief forays into North Korea. Allied pilots are forbidden to follow the Red planes across the Yalu River. Numerous air battles have occurred between Russian-made jets and American jet fighters, principally F-86 Sabre Jets.

American Planes Successful

In these encounters the American planes have been uniformly successful. The consensus of opinion appears to be that the enemy MIG-15 is an excellent plane, at least the equal of the F-86 in speed, maneuverability and rate of climb. The F-86 appears more durable, and, with its wing tanks, has a much greater range.

Casualties inflicted on enemy ground troops by Allied forces are well over a million, while those sustained by all United Nations forces, including the South Koreans, are about a third that number. American battle casualties are slightly more than 73,000.

The Korean conflict is an excellent proving ground for American weapons and tactics, but the lack of an enemy navy, and the great deficiency in enemy air, armor and artillery, make it unrealistic as a preview of any future conflict with a major power, possessing a navy, a large air force, and ample ground weapons of all types.

In the air the principal new weapon on both sides is the jet fighter plane, used extensively for the first time in combat. The jet plane has rendered excellent service, and the experience gained in Korea undoubtedly will result in improvements in design, tactics and techniques.

An aircraft that has proved exceedingly useful in Korea is the helicopter. It has been used mainly in evacuating casualties, and in rescuing pilots forced down behind enemy lines or at sea. The helicopter has demonstrated its serviceability as a means of rapid transport for division commanders and others moving to various sectors of the front, where landing fields for conventional planes are not available. It is also useful for close low-level reconnaissance. The Navy has utilized the small craft for taxi service and messenger duties from ship to ship, and ship to shore.

As a result of the Korean experience, larger helicopters are being given extensive service tests in Korea and in the United States. These new helicopters have much greater passenger and cargo capacity than those now in general use. They should be able to evacuate as many wounded in a single trip as the ordinary helicopter can in three or four trips. They may be used for transporting small military parties to isolated positions difficult to reach by ordinary transport, and to keep such groups supplied with ammunition, food and other requirements. Such helicopters would also prove extremely useful in moving blood plasma and other vital medical supplies to aid stations at the front.

Among the new ground weapons tested in Korea are the 3.5-inch bazooka, the new recoilless weapons, and the improved Patton tank. The new bazooka was produced in quantity after the outbreak of hostilities and rushed to Korea. It played a large part in the destruction of the enemy armor that had spear-headed the invasion of South Korea.

Jeep-mounted recoilless rifles proved to be highly mobile and very effective weapons in action. The improved Patton tank demonstrated its superiority over the Russian-built medium tank used by the enemy. So effective were the American anti-tank weapons and tactics that enemy tanks were destroyed much faster than they could be replaced, and no longer appear in quantities on the battle front.

Extensive use was made in Korea of radar equipment, especially by airmen in bombing targets through the heavy overcast, so often encountered in the combat zone. Proximity fuses were used to a much greater extent against ground targets than in World War II. Thus far there has been no use in Korea of the atomic bomb, atomic artillery, guided missiles and other super-secret weapons that have been reported to be in various stages of development in this country.

One reason for the high mobility of Allied troops in Korea has been the excellent road-building technique of the Corps of Engineers.

Stimulates Rearmament

An important effect of the Korean war on the home front has been its stimulus to national defense. There has been a tremendous increase in military personnel and war production in hurried efforts to provide greater protection against the contingency of World War III. The strength of the Services has been doubled in the past year. New planes, tanks, artillery and vast quantities of other military equipment are now rolling off the assembly lines in ever-increasing quantities. Combat warships are being recommissioned in large numbers, so that our Navy today is probably more effective than the combined navies of the rest of the world.

The combat experience of our forces in Korea is being reflected in the training of members of all the Services. The rotation of troops makes it possible to provide a hard core of combat veterans for each of the new Army divisions.

The ground troops in Korea are now battle-tested. They are tough, proud and confident, and they rank with the best in military history. The fighting in Korea has demonstrated the need for greater physical conditioning of individuals, for more training in night combat, and in methods of dealing with enemy formations behind our lines. These features have already been incorporated in training schedules. Many officers and enlisted men with combat experience in Korea are now serving as instructors at all major training centers.

The prompt reaction of the United Nations in opposition to aggression in Korea has encouraged other countries to strengthen their defenses to maintain their freedom. The military forces of the members of the Atlantic Alliance have been augmented with American aid, which has also been extended to free countries not included in this association.

The heavy Communist losses in Korea have undoubtedly served to postpone, if not eliminate the danger of all-out Red aggression in Indo-China, Burma, Thailand, Malaya and other sections of Southeast Asia, and perhaps has changed the timetable of attempted Communist expansion in western Europe and the Near East.

President Signs UMT Bill And Names Commission

President Truman on 19 June signed into law Universal Military Training and Service legislation, hailed by Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall as a "step of historic significance."

Simultaneously, the President named the five members of the National Security Training Commission—Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, USN-Ret., for a four-year term; Lt. Gen. Raymond S. McClain, USA, presently the Comptroller of the Army, for a five-year term; former Senator and former Representative James W. Wadsworth (R-N.Y.), a pioneer in efforts to obtain U.M.T., for three years; and former Assistant Secretary of State William L. Clayton and Dr. William T. Compton, chairman of the corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who was chairman of the commission that recommended U.M.T. in 1946, for two-year terms.

The NSTC is charged with general supervision of the UMT program and appointment of the Commission was the necessary first step in ultimate implementation of the long-sought program for universal service.

Photographic Exhibit

The Exhibition of 360 entries of the Third Interservice Photography Contest will open with a special ceremony on the Pentagon Concourse 16 July and continue through to 27 July.

The photographs in this final competition represent the best of approximately 1850 entries submitted to the interservice level by the Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

Three judges who are outstanding in various fields of photography will judge this Third Interservice Photography Contest. They are Mr. Edward Steichen, Curator of Photography, Museum of Modern Art, New York City, Mr. Jacob Deschin, Photographic Editor, N. Y. Times and Mr. Arthur Rothstein, Chief Photographer, Look Magazine. The winners will be announced at the opening of the Exhibit on 16 July.

agency having no connection with the Department of Defense. Likewise, the training of medical and dental officers, nurses and enlisted personnel in medical research and preventive medicine would of necessity be so limited as to be of little value.

"It is a fundamental principle that the military departments must exercise administrative and operational control over essential logistic support services and facilities in order to insure accomplishment of their tasks of maintaining national security."

Corps of Engineers

In his letter to the Public Lands Committee, Secretary Pace said:

"The vital importance of retaining operational responsibility for civil works in the Corps of Engineers is affirmed by almost all military authorities consulted, including the present Chief of Staff (General Collins) and four previous Chiefs of Staff (Generals Marshall, MacArthur, Eisenhower, and Hines); a Board of General Officers (Clark, Hodges, Eichelberger, W. B. Smith, and Gilmam); and the Department General Staff.

"Specifically, evidence demonstrates that:

"a. Our military engineering service in World War II was second to none and weighed heavily in our victory;

"b. This paramount position in military engineering was in large measure due to the peacetime organization, training and responsibilities of the Army Corps of Engineers in civil works activities;

"c. Without the peacetime civil works organization, training and experience our Corps of Engineers would not have been able to achieve its unequalled record;

"d. In the type of warfare which can be expected in the future it can be predicted that military engineering will play an even more important role than in World War II;

"e. To strip the Corps of Engineers of its civil works functions would thus be an abandonment of a proved military advantage.

"No adequate evidence is found in the Task Force Reports or the Commission Reports which would support the proposition that any civil advantages, which might accrue from the proposal to transfer operational responsibilities, would compensate for the grave military disadvantages which would result."

Army Considers Problem of Extended Far East Tours

Army officials were reported this week to have under study the problem of extended tours of duty in Japan to which travel of military dependents has been banned since outbreak of war in Korea one year ago.

Recent letters to THE JOURNAL have pointed out the serious morale situation which resulted from the necessity to extend indefinitely the tour of duty in Japan, while simultaneously travel of dependents had to be halted.

It was obvious that with the outbreak of hostilities, the Army's first need was to stabilize personnel in the critical area to provide maximum utilization of available manpower.

Now, however, as a result of the general improvement in the overall manpower situation, it is believed that it may be possible in the near future to restore a definite tour of duty in Japan.

This would mean that although thousands of dependents still would be separated from loved ones on duty in the Far East, morale would be bolstered by the knowledge that after a given length of time persons on duty in Japan would be rotated back to the United States.

The certainty is that top Army civilian and military officials are cognizant of the plight of families long separated by the exigencies of the Far East situation.

Aside from the fact that these prolonged separations strain normal family relations—for example the welfare of children is hurt by long absences from their fathers—the necessity of an officer's maintaining a home for his family in the U. S. while at the same time paying for his own quarters abroad has resulted in much financial hardship.

Military personnel recognized when the fighting began in Korea that separations from loved ones would have to be extended to meet urgent requirements related to the fight against aggression. But the feeling now is that remedial steps are possible, and this is indicated with the disclosure that the matter is now under review at the Pentagon.

Medal for FEC AAA Officer

Maj. Gen. William F. Marquat, USA, Anti-Aircraft Officer, Far East Command, recently presented the Legion of Merit Medal to Col. Riley E. McGarraugh, Executive Officer of the Anti-Aircraft Artillery Section, GHQ, FEC.

During the period 25 June to 2 Nov. 1950, a citation states, Colonel McGarraugh was responsible for coordinating the commitment of AAA units to Korea and for deployment of remaining units to strategic locations in Japan and Okinawa.

Gen. Bergin New A.G.

President Truman this week nominated Maj. Gen. William E. Bergin, USA, Assistant Adjutant General, to succeed Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, USA, as The Adjutant General of the Army, when the latter retires on 30 June.

General Witsell will become Executive Director of Army Emergency Relief.

General Bergin, 59, was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Infantry Reserve in August 1917 and received his Regular Commission on 26 Oct. of that year.

During World War II, General Bergin was Chief of Staff of the Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment of the Chinese Training and Combat Command in the China-Burma-India Theater from February 1942 to 1945, when he returned to the U. S. That same year, he accompanied the late General Joseph W. Stilwell to the Pacific Theater and served with the Tenth Army on Okinawa for five months.

Returning to the United States in November 1945 he was named Deputy Director of Personnel and Administration on the War Department General Staff. In December 1947 he went to Europe to become Director of Personnel and Administration of the European Command.

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, presented Medals of Honor to the families of 11 Army heroes of the Korean conflict at ceremonies 21 June at the Pentagon.

The recipients of the Nation's highest military honor are either missing in action or have been killed in action.

Presentation of the awards brought to 23 the number of Army officers and men who have received the Medal in recognition of conspicuous gallantry in action in Korea.

Soldiers honored, and members of their families who received Medals of Honor in their behalf, were:

Of the Medals of Honor received by soldiers for fighting in Korea, 18 have been won by Infantrymen, two by Combat Engineers, two by members of the Army's newest branch, Armor, and one by a member of the Army Medical Service.

gram for majors reached a cut-off date of 31 Aug. 1945, which is some 14 months beyond the 23 May 1944 cut-off date used for the first round of temporary advancements to major in the 1951 program.

Similarly, where in 1950 the zone of consideration for advancement to lieutenant colonel reached 30 June 1945, the initial phase of this year's program had a cut-off date of 9 March 1944.

What this means is that with the exception of any non-Regular officers who may have come on active duty subsequent to last year's promotions and who were selected for advancement in these initial increments, all of the non-Regulars chosen were officers who were previously considered for promotion.

As for the Regulars, the likelihood is that most of those included on the first increments, released this week, were those officers whose permanent date of rank was such as to have precluded their consideration for promotion last year.

Many Regular officers, it is remembered, protested the 1950 system which emphasized permanent date of rank in consideration for promotion, whereas the new program, described in detail in THE JOURNAL of 31 March, lays stress for all officers, Regular and non-Regular alike, on temporary date of rank.

Army officials decided that having given advantage in the 1950 promotions to permanent date of rank, it would only be fair not to retard the advancement of those Regulars who are serving in higher temporary grades in the 1951 promotions.

There was no word from officials as to when the next lists of promotions would be released, but the expectation is that additional increments for major and lieutenant colonel, as well as first promotions to colonel and captain will be made available shortly.

As a guide to those who may be eligible for consideration in the forthcoming additional temporary promotions, the Zones of Consideration were printed in our 31 March issue.

Storm Hits Ft. Sill

The nation's artillery center at Ft. Sill, Okla., sustained one of its worst mornings 18 June when a windstorm hit the post about 4 a.m., causing damage estimated at $500,000.

Estimates placed the top wind velocity as high as 125 miles per hour. School troops were released from duty by Maj. Gen. A. M. Harper, USA, commanding general, to help clear up the damage.

At Post Field, at least 21 spotter planes were completely wrecked. Instruments, engines and other parts may be salvagable, but wings, frames and the like were bent and torn apart. The fuselage on one L-19 was twisted one-half turn, with the horizontal stabilizer pointing straight down.

An officer in the Department of Air Training estimated damage to planes at $200,000.

The control tower at the field lost all but two of the window panes, with many of the instruments and radio equipment being damaged. Slate from adjacent hangar roofs was driven through the plywood sides of the tower.

Some 62 officers and men were treated in various dispensaries for injuries, most of them minor.

Critical Housing Areas

The Defense Production Administration and the Housing and Home Finance Agency have declared the areas of San Marcos, Tex., site of a reactivated Air Force Base, and Camp Cooke, Calif., as critical defense areas for housing.

This means that credit controls will be relaxed to help relieve the acute housing shortages in these areas.

New Gun Director Is Good News for the Country

BELL TELEPHONE LABORATORIES' NEW "ELECTRICAL THINKING MACHINE" AIMS ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS LIKE THIS ONE. It's even more effective than the Bell Laboratories' famous Electrical Gun Director that proved such a factor in the last war. . . . The radar equipment locates hostile planes, day or night, and feeds continuous information concerning their location into a computer or "electrical thinking machine." . . . At the same time, data relating to wind velocity, velocity of the shells, temperatures, etc., are given to the computer. The machine then calculates where a shell should explode and aims the guns, continuously and automatically, to bring the planes down.

Call to Arms. Once again the research and manufacturing of the Bell System are mighty weapons in the defense of the country.

More than twelve hundred projects for the armed forces were completed in the last war. Many new assignments are now being rushed to completion. This new Fire Control System is already in production.

Skilled Teams at Work. The Bell System's ability to serve the armed forces comes not only from its unique qualifications in the field of electronics, but from the way it is set up and equipped to do the job.

The Bell Telephone Laboratories, who do the research and development, work hand-in-hand with the Western Electric Company, which is the Bell System's own manufacturing unit.

Service and Security. For many years this close, efficient association of research, development, and manufacture has helped to give this country the best telephone service in the world. It is now helping to give the nation the world's best fighting weapons.

Marine Corps Bill

The House Armed Services Committee yesterday, 22 June, reported plans to resume on Monday, 25 June, its hearings on the Marine Corps bill to increase the authorized strength and give the Commandant representation on the Joint Chiefs of Staff. As passed by the Senate, the bill makes the Marine Commandant a non-voting consultant to the JCS. An authorized Marine Corps strength of 400,000 is established in the legislation, which has wide backing on Capitol Hill.

Select Marine Generals

Two Marine Corps selection boards will be convened early next month to name officers for promotion to major general and brigadier general.

Although plans for the boards are not yet completely firm, THE JOURNAL learned, it is expected that they will be convened on 9 July, for major generals, and on 19 July for brigadiers. The dates are subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Navy.

Also, pending approval of Marine Commandant General Clifton B. Cates, the boards are expected to select the largest number of general officers since the end of World War II. Last year, Marine selection boards named four officers for promotion to major general and seven for promotion to brigadier. This year, the boards are expected to select about six officers for two-star rank, and possibly 9-10 for promotion to brigadier general.

A Marine spokesman said that a board for colonels would be convened as soon after the board for brigadiers as it is possible to determine the needs of the Corps.

In the meantime, the Marine Corps said that selections of Reserve captains on inactive duty for promotion to major "will probably be announced about mid-July." The board considering first lieutenants to captain is now expected to complete its work about the middle of August.

The Marine Corps said that inactive Reservists selected for major and captain may expect to be notified through their Reserve districts within approximately six weeks following the completion of the boards. Those who fail of selection will be notified individually by letter from Marine Corps Headquarters.

"Officers selected will be promoted within approximately two to three months after submitting physical examinations," the Corps said. It was pointed out that prompt submission of the examination results will reduce the administrative time necessary in effecting promotions, provided the "running mate" has been promoted. The Marine Corps emphasized that Reserve officers' "running mates" in the regular Marine Corps must be promoted before the Reserves can be promoted.

Marine Construction

Repair work and new construction, to cost over three million dollars, has begun or will begin this month at numerous Marine Corps installations.

The Navy announced on 14 June that contracts totalling $3,160,000 have been let or will be let during June. Bases at which construction will be started include Camp Lejeune, N. C., Quantico, Va., San Diego, Calif., and Parris Island, S. C. Six Reserve centers are also scheduled for repair. They are located at Spokane, Aberdeen and Tacoma, Washington; Brooklyn and Fort Schuyler, N. Y., and at the Submarine Base, New London, Conn.

"Time to Close Ranks"

Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Forrest P. Sherman said this week that he thinks the time has come to end debate on how best to oppose our enemies and to "close ranks."

Addressing the American Legion, Department of Mississippi, at Biloxi, on 18 June, Admiral Sherman said that "differences of opinion are to be expected in our country" but that "it is also the American way to close ranks quickly and present a united front when danger threatens."

He said that although there is "a considerable divergence of opinion as to how our purposes may best be accomplished," he felt "the time has come to close ranks—to exhibit singleness of purpose, faith and determination."

General Woods to Retire

Maj. Gen. Louis E. Woods, USMC, commanding the Second Marine Air Wing at Cherry Point, N. C., will be retired in the rank of lieutenant general on 30 June.

The veteran Marine officer is the senior aviator in the Marine Corps and has completed 34 years' active duty. He is 55. In his present assignment, General Woods is also Commander, Aircraft, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic.

Born in Fredonia, N. Y., he attended Syracuse University there and was commissioned in the Marine Corps in 1917. Seven years later, in 1924, he earned his wings as a Naval aviator. During World War II he commanded the Second Aircraft Wing on Okinawa, and Army, Navy and Marine units on Guadalcanal.

His decorations include the Navy Cross, the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit, the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Presidential Citation.

Permanent Appointments

Two Marine officers, Maj. Gen. Henry D. Linscott and Brig. Gen. John C. McQueen, were nominated this week by President Truman for permanent appointment in their present grades.

General Linscott, currently serving as liaison officer in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations, will become Director of the Marine Corps Landing Force Development Center at Quantico, Va., on 3 July.

General McQueen is Director of Marine Corps Information.

Marine Reserve Strength

The Marine Corps Organized Reserve will soon undergo a change in composition—dropping many infantry units—according to recently drawn plans which were promulgated last week.

As outlined, the planned strength of the Ground Reserve and Organized Aviation squad will be "approximately the same" as before the Korean mobilization, the Corps said. "However, the composition of the Reserve by type of unit is going to be considerably different."

Principal changes outlined by the Corps are the inclusion of a number of service-type units and a considerable group of Security Force personnel. The number of infantry units will be "substantially reduced," the Corps said.

Ground units planned are as follows:

- 10 Infantry Battalions
- 15 Rifle Companies
- 3 105mm Howitzer Battalions
- 2 155mm Howitzer Battalions
- 2 155mm Gun Battalions
- 1 4.5" Rocket Battalion
- 2 90mm AAA Gun Battalions
- 4 90mm AAA Gun Batteries
- 1 AAA-AW Battalion
- 8 AAA-AW Batteries
- 1 Engineer Battalion
- 8 Engineer Companies
- 2 Tank Battalions
- 1 Amphibian Tractor Battalion
- 2 Armored Amphibian Companies
- 2 Amphibian Truck Companies
- 2 ANGLICO
- 1 Air Delivery Company
- 6 Signal Companies
- 1 Radio Company
- 6 Truck Companies
- 3 Ordnance Maintenance Companies
- 3 Signal Maintenance Companies
- 3 Automotive Maintenance Companies
- 3 Engineer Maintenance Companies
- 3 Cargo Companies
- 6 General Supply Companies
- 3 Shore Party Companies
- *100 Security Force Detachments (Infantry Type Units)

"An approximate figure. These units will be grouped together in the most feasible manner based on availability of personnel and facilities, and consistent with economical use of Inspector-Instructor personnel."

The Corps said that "as of 1 July" there will be thirty VMF (fighter) squadrons at 25 Naval Air Stations. Ten of the 25 "old" squadrons have membership "near their authorized strength" and the remaining 15, personnel of which have been mobilized, are now recruiting back up to strength. In addition, five VMF squadrons have been newly commissioned and are recruiting to strength. Twelve Marine Ground Control Intercept squadrons are expected to be recruited back to operating strength during the next twelve months, which will bring the aviation organized squadrons up to the same complement that existed prior to the Korean conflict.

song, two enemy companies stubbornly fought off Allied attempts to dislodge them from strong dug-in positions on high ground. Other enemy forces in the same general area fought a bitter defensive action. Northwest of Kansong two enemy battalions aggressively engaged Allied forces.

Prolonged Allied naval bombardments of east coast ports of North Korea continued throughout the week. Fire from enemy shore batteries at Wonsan was much more prolonged and effective than at any time during the war. The U. S. Destroyer-Minesweeper Thompson was hit and several seamen were killed or wounded. Intense counter-battery fire from Allied warships finally silenced the enemy guns.

Other warships participating in the Wonsan bombardment included the U. S. Destroyers Evans, Isbell and Brinkley Bass. Near misses from enemy shore batteries showered the deck of the Evan with shrapnel, without inflicting damage or casualties.

The U. S. Heavy Cruiser Toledo, the Destroyers Stickell and Duncan and the Frigate Everett shelled key transportation points at Songjin and Chongjin. Farther south near the front line of the east coast the U. S. Destroyer Blue provided sea artillery support for advancing South Korean troops, inflicting heavy casualties on enemy formations.

Marine flyers from the U. S. Carrier Sicily off the west coast knocked out enemy shore batteries and supply buildings west of Haeju. One exceptionally large fire observed after the attack indicated that a fuel or ammunition storehouse may have been hit. Other Marine planes struck supply docks near Kymipo with napalm and high explosive bombs.

The first few days of the week were marked by furious air battles, all of them in the northwest corner of Korea near Sinuiju, just across the Yalu River from the Chinese Red air base of Antung in Manchuria. In the combats during the first four days of this week 24 enemy planes were destroyed or damaged.

In one air engagement last Sunday, 17 June, a force of 25 or more enemy MIG-15 jet fighters were intercepted between Sinuiju and Sinanju by 30 F-86 Sabre Jets. The enemy pilots showed unusual aggressiveness, but in the 20-minute air battle that ensued one enemy plane was shot down and six were damaged, without loss or damage to our aircraft. Later the same day 26 more enemy planes were sighted but these avoided combat.

On Monday, 18 June, more than 40 MIGs were engaged by 33 Sabre Jets in a sweep along the border. During the encounter in which there were duels at altitudes of 35,000 feet three enemy pilots were seen to bail out of their disabled planes. Later in the day 16 other Communist aircraft made short passes at Sabre Jets and then fled to Manchuria to escape counter-attacks.

The following day, Tuesday, 19 June, the third successive day of air battles, 27 Sabre Jets fought 40 Red MIGs over a wide area above Sonchon, 35 miles south of the Manchurian border, farther from Manchuria than Red planes usually venture in force. Two enemy planes were shot down and several others were damaged.

The fourth day of the air battles, on Wednesday, 20 June, was the most spectacular of the series. A big fight occurred in Northwest Korea, in which propeller-driven, as well as jet planes participated on both sides. A flight of Allied Mustang F-51 conventional fighter planes attacked six Russian built enemy propeller planes. All Red planes were hit. One enemy Yak fighter and two Red Stormovik attack bombers were shot down, another Stormovik was probably destroyed and two others were damaged. One Mustang was lost.

A formation of 32 Sabre Jets, flying cover for the Mustangs, was attacked by 36 enemy jets. The battle was fought at altitudes of from 6,000 to 13,000 feet. Four enemy planes were damaged. In the four days of air battles 9 enemy aircraft were destroyed, one was probably destroyed and 14 were damaged.

In addition to engaging the enemy in the air the Far East Air Force continued to render close support to ground troops, to interdict enemy supply lines, and to bomb North Korean air fields. B-26 medium bombers from Okinawa bases made visual bombing attacks on airfields at Sunan, just north of Pyongyang, and on marshaling yards at Kowon. Clusters of bombs cratered the runways at the Sunan fields.

F-51 Mustangs, Marine F4Fs and F9Fs, and F-80 jet Shooting Stars struck behind enemy lines and along the front with napalm, anti-personnel bombs, and machinegun fire. Heavy casualties were inflicted on enemy troops, while hundreds of buildings, numerous vehicles, pack animals, gun positions, and railroad cars were destroyed or damaged.

American B-26 light bombers and F-84 Thunder Jets concentrated their attacks on several enemy airfields north and northwest of Pyongyang. In pre-dawn attacks light and medium bombers covered entrenched troops with air-bursting bombs. Four Allied aircraft were lost to enemy ground fire.

Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy, USN, Commanding the Far East Naval Forces, announced this week that during the year that the Korean war has been in progress the Navy and Marine Corps have lost approximately 300 planes, none as a result of air battles. These losses include aircraft shot down by ground fire or wrecked in operational accidents.

Navy and Marine planes alone have dropped 70 million pounds of high explosives on Communist targets in the past year, Admiral Joy reported. Pilots under his control flew 67,000 sorties in that time and inflicted 57,000 casualties on the enemy.

The Department of Defense has announced that from the beginning of the war through 7 June 1951 the enemy sustained an estimated total of 1,143,000 casualties. This includes the estimated number of killed and wounded and non-battle casualties, and the actual number of prisoners of war. This aggregate is an increase of 12,161 over the number previously estimated for a period from the beginning of the war through 5 June, reflecting the heavy casualties suffered by the enemy in two days of the recent Allied counter-attack.

The estimates of enemy non-battle casualties appear low, especially in view of persistent reports that epidemics of smallpox, typhus, and typhoid fever are taking a heavy toll of enemy soldiers. Brig. Gen. Crawford F. Sams, USA, a medical officer who recently returned after service in Korea, indicated his belief that losses among the Communist troops from these diseases are extremely heavy. General Sams recently was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for a daring journey behind enemy lines in North Korea to investigate reports of ravages of contagious diseases.

Col. John L. Throckmorton, USA, until recently in command of the 5th Infantry Regimental Combat Team in Korea, told a Pentagon press conference this week that American successes in Korea against the great numerical superiority of the enemy were due in part to superior fire power, particularly air and artillery, to the excellent training of our soldiers in the expert use of a wide variety of weapons, and to close integration of tank-infantry teams. Colonel Throckmorton is now senior aide to General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff.

The Senate Armed Services Committee has voted to report favorably the Air Force Organization Act, passed previously by the House.

As submitted to the Senate, the measure amends the House version to give the Air Force Chief of Staff, under the direction of the Secretary of the Air Force, "command" authority over all members and organizations of the Air Force.

The House bill stipulates that the Chief of Staff shall have only "supervision" over Air Force personnel and units. The "command" authority was asked by Air Force officials during House hearings, but was denied.

It was asserted by Secretary Thomas K. Finletter and General Hoyt S. Vandenberg that the Air Force Chief of Staff should have "command" authority similar to that of the Chief of Naval Operations. The Army Chief of Staff is not given "command" authority in the Army Organization Act.

The Senate Armed Services Committee said also that a general officer should be made a member of the Air Staff to advise the Secretary of the Air Force and the Chief of Staff on all matters relating to the Reserve components.

As for the matter of a separate Judge Advocate General's Corps, such as exists in the Army, the Senate committee said:

"During the hearings on this bill witnesses appeared urging that appropriate provisions be included in the bill for the establishment of a separate Judge Advocate General's Corps within the Air Force, similar to that now provided in the Army. While the committee has not amended the bill to include such provisions, it has stricken from the bill provisions which would have precluded the establishment of such a separate corps. No conclusive evidence has been submitted to the committee which clearly resolves this issue. In view of this fact the committee feels that it will be preferable to defer any decision in this matter until such time as the members of the Court of Military Appeals and the Judge Advocates General of the Armed Forces have had an opportunity to observe the working of the courts-martial procedures within the services and to include in their annual report recommendations in this matter which they deem pertinent."

U. S. AIR FORCE

Expand 57th Air Div.

Further changes in the expansion of the 57th Air Division at Fairchild AFB, Wash., are announced by Brig. Gen. C. J. Bondley, jr., USAF, division commander.

Immediate command changes involve the assignment of Col. Kenneth B. Hobson as Commanding Officer of the 92d Bombardment Wing, and Col. Edward D. Edwards as Deputy Commander of the 11th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing. Former commander of the 92d Wing, Col. Claude E. Putnam, has been reassigned to Strategic Air Command headquarters at Offutt AFB, Nebr., where he will be Director of Plans.

Colonel Hobson comes to the Fairchild base from Strategic Air Command headquarters. His assumption of command of the 92d Wing coincides with the redesignation of the organization from a "Medium" to "Heavy" unit. The 92d is presently equipped with B-29 type aircraft and has been classified a "Medium" unit since Air Force acceptance of the B-36 Peacemaker relegated the B-29 from the Heavy to Medium class.

General Bondley indicated that although the redesignation of the 92d Wing was a preliminary step in the planned transition into B-36 type aircraft, it would have no immediate bearing on the assignment of the aircraft to the Fairchild base.

Also being redesignated is the 11th Wing, which steps up from a "Light" to "Medium" reconnaissance wing. The 11th is currently being equipped with the medium B-29.

Colonel Edwards returned to the United States in March from combat duty with the Far East Air Forces where he commanded the 91st Strategic Reconnaissance squadron from the beginning of hostilities in June 1950 until his recent return.

Key MATS Shifts

Two high commands of the Military Air Transport Service at Kelly AFB, Tex., were changed at ceremonies on 16 June.

Col. George W. Peterson, USAF, succeeded Capt. Daniel W. Tomlinson, USNR, as deputy commander, Continental Division, MATS. Captain Tomlinson is retiring. Colonel Peterson, who returned recently from the Armed Forces Industrial College, was director of operations for Continental Division before going to the Service college.

Col. Andrew B. Cannon, USAF, succeeded Col. Murray W. Crowder, jr., USAF, as commander of the 1700th Air Transport Group. Colonel Crowder has been ordered to the Armed Forces Staff College. Colonel Cannon has been deputy commander of the 1700th.

Jet School Opens

Bryan AFB, Tex., a jet training school at Bryan, Texas, is now operational, under command of Col. James C. McGehee.

Colonel McGehee came to Bryan from Washington, D. C., where he was an executive of the estimates division in the Directorate of Intelligence office at Air Force headquarters. The activation of Bryan increases to 22 the number of bases under Flying Training Air Force with headquarters in Waco, Tex.

Shift Air ROTC Officers

Maj. Frank J. Dillon, jr., and Maj. William P. Vanden Dries, jr., both on the staff of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute Troy, N. Y., since the unit was formed in 1949, have been appointed commanding officers of new A.F.R.O.T.C. units at Dartmouth and Queens colleges.

Wins AF Photo Contest

Air Training Command has received the Air Force's Worldwide Photography Contest trophy for capturing high command honors with one first, three seconds and one third place.

Presentation of the handsome gold trophy was made by Col. C. O. Carter, deputy commanding officer of Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, to Maj. John M. Carney, personnel services director for Air Training Command.

Colonel Carter made the presentation in behalf of Air Force Chief of Staff General Hoyt S. Vandenberg; Maj. Carney represented Lt. Gen. Robert W. Harper, commanding general of ATC at Scott AFB, Ill.

ATC's prize-winning photographers, in the contest held June 1 at Dayton's Art Institute, were the following:

Pvt. Bruce E. Bailey, first in Salon Class, Landscape and Architecture Category; Pfc. Kemon A. Dukas of Chanute AFB, second in the same category.

Lt. Clifford B. Gordie, of Randolph AFB, second in Salon Class, Service Life Category; Pfc. Jack W. Schaeffer of Chanute AFB, second in Salon Class, General Pictorial Category, and Capt. Howard Mick of Perrin AFB, third in Snapshot Class.

Highest individual honor of the contest went to S/Sgt. Robert L. Barnett of Davis-Monthan AFB, Strategic Air Command. His salon print, "Picture Symbol of China," in the People and Customs Category, was judged "best of the show" in competition with more than 200 entries from 16 major commands.

Other first place winners were: Salon Class, Service Life Category—S/Sgt. Amos A. Petro of the 12th Air Force, USAF; Salon Class, General Pictorial Category—S/Sgt. Joseph C. Sawyer, of Davis-Monthan AFB, SAC.

Color Class—Capt. J. J. Taristano of Wiesbaden AFB, USAF; Snapshot Class—T/Sgt. Richard Byer of Dobbins AFB, ConAC.

Judges were Ray Mackland, picture editor of Life Magazine; Col. George W. Goddard, chief of the Air Research and Development Command's Photographic Laboratory; Dr. Walter Clark of Eastman Kodak Company, and Charles Hubbell, Cleveland commercial and calendar artist.

The contest winners competed in the third annual Inter-service Photography Contest 22 June in Washington.

AF OCS Graduation

General Walter Krueger, USA-Ret, senior member of the San Antonio's retired officer colony, delivered the commencement address yesterday, 22 June to 224 graduates—including 33 WAFs—of Class 51-B of the USAF Officer Candidate School at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Under the Officer Candidate School system at Lackland, in which classes are of six-months duration and two classes overlap, Class 51-C will graduate on 21 Sept. Class 51-D will report for training 2 and 3 July. Class 51-D will number 320, 40 of whom will be WAFs.

Randolph AFB Changes

Col. Harold L. Jones, executive officer at Randolph AFB, Tex., has been named Inspector General of the Flying Training Air Force at Waco, Tex., and is succeeded by Col. Thomas W. Steed, formerly commanding officer of the 4th Air Division, Barksdale AFB, La.

Also at Randolph, Col. Ben A. Garland was ordered to the Air War College at Maxwell AFB, Ala., and is replaced by Col. Richard N. Ellis, commanding officer of the 3510th Air Base Group at Randolph.

Colonel Ellis, in turn, is relieved by Lt. Col. Vincent J. Donahue. New training and operations officer at Randolph is Lt. Col. Gaillard R. Peck, who succeeds Lt. Col. Andrew J. Britton, jr., ordered to B-47 jet bomber base at Wichita, Kans.

AF Promotions Due

Air Force officials reported this week that the selection board to name officers for permanent promotion to the rank of colonel, which convened on 11 June, has completed its work, with announcement of selection results expected shortly—possibly next week.

Meantime, a board of senior generals met on 20 June to select officers for promotion to the permanent and temporary ranks of major general and brigadier general.

Concurrently, it was stated that reports have been received from the major commands related to the forthcoming temporary promotion program for officers.

However, Air Force Headquarters has not yet dispatched promotion quotas to the commands, although it is still anticipated that first advancements will be made about 1 Aug.

The full text of the new regulation on which the forthcoming promotions will be based was published in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL.

In the field of airmen promotions, a new regulation is being prepared which in general will reduce the time-in-grade requirements for advancement. This regulation will not become effective until released by the printers, Air Force officials stated.

Fighter Unit Returns

Seven officers and 18 airmen of the battle-famed 27th Fighter-Escort Wing have arrived at Bergstrom AFB, Tex., from Japan. The remainder of the wing will return to its home base during the summer months.

The party consisted of supply and administrative personnel, which will prepare for the return of the wing, according to Col. C. T. Ewinson, 42d Air Division commander at Bergstrom.

The 27th will be welcomed back from seven months Korean combat duty to Bergstrom and to its adopted "home" of Austin with gala celebrations.

FIRST REGULAR ARMY

Ten companies of Continental soldiers employed as infantry near Boston, Mass., 14 June, 1775, were the forerunner of today's U. S. Army. The companies—six from Pennsylvania and two each from Virginia and Maryland—were the first organized force of American troops to be formed.

that Selfridge Air Force Base begins its 35th year of service to the Air Force and the United States. It began on 1 July 1917, when members of the First Aero Squadron arrived from Kelly Field to activate Selfridge as a training station for the embryonic air force of World War I. Despite the swampy sod field and the flimsy aircraft which made the training of that period a matter of simple survival, a sufficient number of pilots emerged to form the nuclei of the First and Second Pursuit Groups and serve with distinction in France.

After the armistice, Selfridge became the home of the First Pursuit Group—an organization which contributed greatly to the building of our modern Air Force. Spurred by General Billy Mitchell's determination to prove the value of air power to the American people, the group participated throughout the between-wars-years in every possible activity to publicize the potentials of the service. Flying in air races, demonstrations, non-stop flights and daring rescue missions, Selfridge airmen fought hard to create and maintain public interest in military aviation.

Despite their equipment and facilities many junior officers serving at Selfridge in the twenties and thirties were convinced of the great future awaiting the Air Force. These men, by methods of trial and error, formulated policies which are standard operating procedures today. In the process, they developed characteristics of leadership which paid great dividends when the nation called for Air Force leaders at the outbreak of World War II.

From the incomplete rosters and records of an earlier day at Selfridge no fewer than 62 former and present Selfridge officers have attained star rank. Although there are undoubtedly other general officers who have served at Selfridge, the history lists such famous Air Force leaders as General Carl Spaatz, Lt. General Ennis Whitehead, James Doolittle, Earle Partridge, Howard Craig, George Brett and Curtis LeMay, Major Generals Ralph Royce, Glenn Barcus, Bryant Boatner, Alden Crawford, Robert Douglass, Harry A. Johnson, St. Clair Street, Walter Todd, Paul Williams, Emmet O'Donnell, Paul Wurtsmith, Frank Andrews, Davenport Johnson, Grandison Gardner, Roger Ramey, Francis Griswold, Robert Burns, Frank Hunter, Gerald Brower, Morris Nelson and Don Putt, Brigadier Generals Edward Alexander, Edward Anderson, Harry Armstrong, James Briggs, Jarred Crabb, William Eckert, James Fitzmaurice, Burton Hovey, David Hutchinson, Frederick Kimble, Julius Lacey, Aubrey Moore, Robert Oliver, Harold George, Yantis Taylor, Kingston Tibbets, Stuart Wright, Henry Claggett, Mark Bradley, Frank Lackland, Edward Underhill, William Morgan, Norris Harbold, Clarence Irvine, Homer Sanders, John F. Egan, Joseph Morris, Maurice Woodbury, Jessie Auton, Walcott Hayes, Charles Danforth, Arthur Meehan, Victor Strachey and Raymond Culbertson.

Truly, Selfridge Air Force Base can be called the testing ground for future generals.

Since its activation in 1917, Selfridge has kept close pace with the development of the Air Force. The sod landing field has changed to the most modern of concrete runways. The tar-paper shacks have been replaced by permanent brick buildings and the Curtis "Jennies" have evolved to the fastest fighter planes in the world—F-86 Sabres—and finest all-weather interceptor aircraft—the F-94. In a like manner, the mission and responsibilities of the base have increased with the development of the air age.

In 1947, after fighting units had finally returned from foreign soils, the 56th Fighter Group, which had distinguished itself in the European Theater with more than a thousand victories, occupied Selfridge as its permanent station. Since that date, Selfridge has grown in personnel and facilities until today it is considered one of the principal stations of the Air Defense Command. In addition to the 56th Fighter-Interceptor Wing, 30th Air Division, and Tenth Air Force Headquarters, Selfridge is also the home station of the 2242d AFRTC; Flight "D," 5th Rescue Squadron; Detachment 16-8L, 16th Weather Squadron; and Detachment 1918-5 AACCS Squadron.

Lieutenant Thomas Selfridge, first casualty of United States military aviation, for whom the base is named, would be proud of his namesake if he could return today. The officers and airmen of Selfridge are well acquainted with their responsibility and devote every possible hour to preparation for successful defensive action. Their "watchdog" instincts are highly developed and they stand ready to accomplish their assigned mission.

AF Reservist Policy

Air Force Reservists on extended active duty from the Organized (pay status) Reserve will not have their tours extended involuntarily from 21 to 24 months as is authorized by the new Universal Military Training bill under present USAF Headquarters planning. However, all such Reservists called in the future will serve 24 months.

At the same time, it was stated that there is contemplated no change in the present Air Force policy authorizing airmen Reservists from the Volunteer Reserve to separate upon completion of 12 months of active duty upon request. The new UMTS bill authorizes 17 months of service for these individuals. The Air Force has previously said that no future calls from this category of Reservists is contemplated.

It is anticipated that all other Reservists now serving on involuntary orders will remain on active duty for the 17 months authorized in the new law.

All Reservists now serving voluntarily or who may be called to duty on voluntary orders in the future, will, in the case of officers, serve indefinite tours of duty.

Airmen will serve prescribed enlistment tours.

Limit AF Leave

The Air Force has ordered a 15-day maximum on leave of persons going to and from overseas commands.

The action was made necessary by the acceleration of the FEAF rotation, which now is returning three months' eligibles each month who have completed normal overseas tours, together with normal world-wide overseas requirements and the additional personnel required for the overseas expansion program.

All this will mean substantial withdrawals from ZI commands. As a result, in order to reduce pipeline ineffectuals to a minimum, until Air Force resources permit, leaves and delays en route for replacements and returnees have been restricted to a 15-day maximum, except in those cases where additional leave is justified for compassionate reasons.

ENGINEERS' SUPPLIES

The amount of petroleum pipe used by Army Engineers during World War II would circle the United States three times. The Army Engineers also used enough rails to lay four standard gauge tracks from Washington, D. C., to San Francisco.

"Much of our trouble is the result of military weakness."—BERNARD M. BARUCH.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Establishment and operation of a Universal Training and Service program and the building up of readiness for industrial production for war as bases for an "enduring system of National Defense."
2. Continued scientific research and development, particularly in all new and unconventional devices and methods of warfare.
3. Revision of Career Compensation Act to correct injustices demonstrated by experience, including adequate compensation of junior officers with long service in enlisted grades. Permanent legislation for special pay for personnel actually engaged in combat with the enemy. More realistic allowances, including those for travel and per diem. Improved retirement pay for disabled and wounded personnel.
4. Early construction of adequate government quarters for Service personnel at all permanent stations, supplemented by government-sponsored private construction to meet expansion needs.
5. Continuance and extension of medical and dental care for Service families; provision for education at government expense of children of Service personnel at stations where suitable free public schools are not available; and survivor benefits for dependents.
6. Restoration of military exemptions from Federal Income Tax, broadened to include all retired pay from taxation. Recall to active duty of militarily useful retired officers, together with liberalization of ban on dual compensation so that the government may utilize fully the services of all capable retired personnel.
7. A satisfactory and orderly promotion system for warrant officers to assure all qualified appointees of reaching top grade prior to retirement.
8. Adjustment of promotion procedures to meet current emergency needs and to assure retention on active duty of all qualified officers.

Preserve Military Functions. The Bureau of the Budget, the Department of Defense, and other concerned agencies have now recommended against the proposal to take Army, Navy, and Air Force hospitals and dispensaries, and to some extent, their medical personnel, from the Armed Forces and combine them with governmental civilian services under a single Department of Health. Likewise, Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., has officially registered that Department's opposition to the bill to transfer the civil functions of the Corps of Engineers to the Department of the Interior. These movements originated in the Hoover Commission on Reorganization of the Government, although there was dissension even there, for some members refused to go along with the provisions concerning the military. However, since the commission was disbanded a "Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report" has worked assiduously to force Congress to enact them into law. Their latest move was to bring about the organization of a "National Advisory Board of the Doctors Committee for Improved Federal Medical Services," composed of outstanding physicians. However, the petition which that affiliate organization submitted to Congress this week did not endorse the bill sponsored by the Hoover group, merely contenting itself with stating that it is "interested" in the Hoover recommendations and asking Congress to give "consideration to the federal medical programs." We hope and believe that these actions by the department heads will mark the end of these movements.

Dependents to Far East. A most critical morale problem faces the Army in the matter of denying personnel whose families are not already there the privilege of transporting their dependents to Japan. Travel of dependents to Japan was cut off early in the Korean war, apparently on the grounds of conservation of shipping space so sorely needed for the supply of combat troops. Since then much has occurred to aggravate the morale situation. Those families already there have been permitted to remain. The transportation of civilians and their dependents has continued. Officers willing to pay commercial transportation for their dependents have been denied the privilege. The tour of duty in Japan is now indeterminate. Personnel hospitalized from Korea (where a systematic rotation plan is in effect) to Japan and who remain in Japan cannot send for their families nor can they be told when they can return to the states. The Department's statement, printed in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, contending that Service families in Japan are an additional burden on Army logistics while civilians are not, seems rather weak. The Department is now working on a plan to establish definite tours of duty for personnel in Japan, which would

Pay Relief Urgent

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your efforts to secure either a direct pay raise for the Armed Services, or an indirect pay raise through reinstatement of the military tax exemption, are most gratifying. I believe that some relief from the spiral of inflation must be accorded those in the Service, particularly career officers, if the standards of quality are to be maintained, and if the standard of living expected of an officer is not to create a financial hardship.

Expenses of those in the Service are usually greater than their civilian counterparts. As only one example, they must move much more frequently than civilians, which is expensive and is seldom completely covered by the travel allowances. For instance, I have had to move three times in the past year since returning from overseas.

However, in order to get out of the field of generalities, I thought some concrete evidence might be useful to you in analyzing the problem. A review of my income tax papers for the past 5 years, including 1951, estimated, reveals the following interesting data:

Year	Army Pay	Tax Withheld	Take Home Pay	Monthly
1947(1)	$5,575.08	$342.00(3)	$5,233.08	$436.09
1948(2)	6,204.96	484.00(3)	5,720.96	476.75
1949	5,682.21	621.30(4)	5,060.91	421.75
1950	5,970.75	609.30(4)	5,361.45	438.45
1951	5,985.00	698.40(4)	5,286.60	440.55

(1) includes parachute & overseas pay part year.

(2) includes parachute & overseas pay full year.

(3) after $1500.00 military tax exemption.

(4) exemptions increased to 3, account of baby, but counterbalanced by increased tax rates.

You can see from the above that I have stood still financially during this period, although my family responsibilities have increased and I have progressed to more responsible jobs. In common with other Americans, my cost of living has gone up, but as my take-home pay is just where it was five years ago, my standard of living has been somewhat curtailed, to say the least.

During these five years, I have seen "unification" of the Services; I have seen my contemporaries in the Air Force liberally promoted to "eagle" colonels (current criteria: in grade of Lt. Col. since 1949); I have seen my same age group in the Marines certified into war in Korea, is vitally important to Service morale.

McCarthy Fires a "Dud." The most significant phase of Senator McCarthy's irresponsible and boring outburst against the Secretary of Defense, General George C. Marshall, is its complete failure to arouse any reaction except repugnance. The fact is that General Marshall's long career of selfless devotion to the Nation, his brilliant accomplishments in peace and war, his valuable contributions to the military establishment which will be evidenced for many years in the future, and his present sacrifice of a well-earned retirement, are so well known and self-evident that McCarthy's intemperate statements and repulsive innuendoes sullied only himself.

permanent grade from temporary grade and since, promoted to full colonel. With the slow Army promotion system apparently stalemated (I have been in grade since 1943), there doesn't seem to be any pay relief from that quarter.

I see by the papers shipyard workers plugging for 15% pay increases, auto and heavy industry workers getting their 3d and 4th round increases, and, finally, a prospect of a 12% increase in personal income taxes. With this new tax schedule, we in the Services will actually have to take a pay cut.

I know the above will not fall on deaf ears, for as spokesman for the Services, you will do what is democratically possible to afford relief for those of us in the Service.

"Ground Soldier"

War Wounded Penalized

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

As a reader and subscriber to THE JOURNAL for many years, may I call your attention to a source of disgust to many unfortunate officers assigned to the Far East Command after service in Korea. Through the unfortunate chance of medical evacuation from Korea, they now find themselves assigned to duty in Japan on an indefinite limited duty status with partial permanent disabilities, with no chance of rotation back to their families in the States and denied the privilege of bringing their families to Japan. This despite their eligibility for rotation from Korea to which they cannot return because of their disabilities.

How many officers are in this status, the undersigned has no way of knowing except from personal observation, however I suspect that the proportion continues to grow. I am now on duty with an organization, being no longer a patient. Japan is a pleasant place for duty provided one's family is here, but that is denied those of us that found ourselves hospitalized from Korea.

Another factor in our irritation is the Air Force rotation plan just announced for air personnel in Japan as well as Korea. The Air Force plan will clear their people who have served their normal tour of duty in Japan by January of 1952 and starting in February, 1952 they will return on completion of their normal tour. What the Army's normal tour is now, no one here knows.

"Disgusted"

THE conference of British and Iranian representatives on the controversy caused by the nationalization of the vast British-owned oil properties by the government of Iran broke down almost as soon as it started this week, thus precipitating a new oil crisis, fraught with possible grave international consequences. The Iranian government curtly demanded 75 per cent of the profits of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company as the price of permitting the continued operation of the industry by the oil company. In addition it insisted that the remaining 25 per cent be banked against future claims.

The British offered a cash advance of $28 million, and $4.4 million monthly while negotiations proceeded. This compromise was indignantly rejected by the aging and ailing premier of Iran, Mohammed Mossadegh, who gave the British the ultimatum of surrendering all profits or losing access to the oil. The British representatives said they were unable to accept such terms and the conference broke up in a bitter disagreement.

As a result the British completed plans to evacuate their nationals from Iran. They will not use force to resist seizure of the oil properties, which will be given up to Iran, but they will be prepared to safeguard the lives of 3,000 oil workers while they are being evacuated, even though this means the use of military force. British naval vessels are nearby and a paratroop brigade is at Cyprus, a thousand miles from the oil properties.

The impasse leaves the Iranian government in desperate financial plight, since it derives 40 per cent of its revenues from oil royalties. The Iranians do not possess the technical knowledge or skill to enable them to continue operation of the oil industry, and there seems small likelihood that they will be able to secure competent foreign technicians. Furthermore, they have no tanker fleet to transport the oil, nor marketing facilities for the product. Some observers feel that Iranian politicians have overplayed the oil nationalization, and in doing so have whipped up anti-foreign agitation to a point where they now don't dare to accept any compromise, even though realizing it is in the interest of their country to do so.

Great Britain this week took positive steps to stop all shipments of strategic materials to Red China through Hong Kong, the principal point of entry for British trade. Sir Hartley Shawcross, president of the British Board of Trade, announced in the House of Commons that, beginning Tuesday, 26 June, all exports from the United Kingdom to Hong Kong and China will be placed under licensing control. He said no licenses will be granted for shipments of "goods which in the present circumstances could be of strategic and military importance." The British embargo will also apply to such materials from all British dependent territories.

Mr. Shawcross pointed out that Hong Kong depends on its trade with other countries and expressed the hope that "the arrangements we have now established will permit that trade to go on, while insuring that there will be no re-exports to China of goods which may have any military or strategic significance." British spokesmen in Hong Kong said that trade with Red China has been cut in half since the first of the year. The British crown colony of Hong Kong, with its huge Chinese population, is dependent on China for most of its food.

Previously the British had cut off all shipments of rubber from Malaya to Red China. France has also announced full compliance with the United Nations embargo, and other non-Communist members of the United Nations, with few exceptions, are falling in line. The world organization cannot enforce such an embargo, but its recommendations to its members are expected to have great weight.

President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines this week signed a measure to prevent any further shipments of strategic goods from his country to Communist-dominated areas. The new law specifically bans export to Red countries of military equipment, arms, ammunition, aircraft, vessels, scrap metal and all imported goods. Agricultural products of the Philippines, including lumber and sugar, may be exported without special permission. Iron ores, copra, abaca, and cordage may be exported after the application has been officially screened.

American officials are hopeful that the embargo on strategic materials will prove very effective in hampering the Red prosecution of the Korean war. If stoppage of the flow of such materials to Red China from non-Communist maritime countries is reasonably complete the Reds will be hard pressed to supply their troops in combat with their essential requirements.

At present the Chinese Reds get much of their equipment and supplies from Russia. These materials ordinarily must be sent great distances from points of origin by way of the trans-Siberian railway. If Red China were cut off from all other sources of supply, outside of China and Russia, the burden on the Soviet Union would correspondingly increase, and make China more of a liability than an asset to Russia.

The United States this week announced that relatively small amounts of military equipment had been transferred to Yugoslavia. The State Department has under consideration a request from that country for more extensive military aid. From time to time there have been reports that Yugoslavia was in imminent danger of an attack by Russia or her satellite countries. These attacks have failed to materialize, but many feel the danger still exists. The Yugoslav army is large and well trained, but is somewhat lacking in modern military equipment. It could prove very useful in the defense not only of its own country, but also of Western Europe, in the event of Russian aggression.

The United States this week sent its first large shipment of wheat to the famished people of India, in compliance with recent Congressional legislation, providing for a loan to India of $190 million with which to purchase 2 million tons of wheat in this country. The shipment was made only five days after the authorization was signed by the President.

The capital of the United States was host this week to the popular president of Ecuador, Galo Plaza Lasso. The South American statesman, who is no stranger to Washington, having been educated at the nearby University of Maryland, was given a particularly cordial welcome. While in Washington he was honor guest at the usual round of official functions, and conferred with the President and Secretary of State Acheson on matters pertaining to hemispheric solidarity.

First Psychological Warfare Class—The first Psychological Warfare Class in Army history was graduated on 14 June at Ft. Riley, Kans., as 39 officers received diplomas from Lt. Col. John O. Weaver, Chief of Psychological Warfare, Army General School. Guest speaker for the graduation was Col. Donald F. Hall, Chief of Psychological Warfare, Division, G-2, Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va., who was introduced by Col. George G. Elms, acting commandant of the Army General School.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Lady Generals and Admirals—A member of the House Armed Services Committee wants the Services to promote the heads of the WACs, WAFs, Army Nurses and Women Marines to the rank of brigadier general (one star) and he asks the Navy to make the commanding officers of the WAVES and Navy Nurse Corps rear admirals (two stars). He says that if the Air Force Nurse Corps, presently headed by a lieutenant colonel, should expand sufficiently, it also should have a general officer in command.

Representative Landsdale Sasser (D-Md) declares that "the time has arrived when we must fully recognize and show our appreciation for the splendid work which has been done and is increasingly being done by the women in our Armed Forces."

Meantime, as Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg continues to call for greater utilization of women by the Services, Col. Mary A. Hallaren, Director of the WAC, said the Women's Army Corps is seeking the views of its commanding officers to evaluate its leadership policies in the light of increasing enlistment of women in younger age groups.

Colonel Hallaren said administration and command of today's WAC, whose average age is 20, differs from that of her World War II sister whose average age was 29. Increasing appeal of the Women's Army Corps as a career for young women and a reduction in 1948 of the minimum enlistment age from 20 to 18 years were attributed by Colonel Hallaren as major reasons for the drop in the average age of women in the WAC. In the next year, the WAC expects to triple its present strength of 10,000.

To study the changes every WAC company commander and every potential commander in the United States has been ordered to the WAC Training Center at Ft. Lee, Va., for a concentrated course of instruction. In addition, a representative group from overseas stations will participate.

Attending in groups of 25, the company commanders and Army staff advisers will devote an entire week to discussion of problems of command, administration, leadership, recreation and morale, personnel, and other subjects related to command functions. In all, more than 100 officers ranging in rank from lieutenant through lieutenant colonel will attend the conferences during the next two months.

Bradley to Remain on Active Duty—In the preface to his new book, A Soldier's Story, released this week by the publisher, General of the Army Omar N. Bradley indicates that he expects to remain on active duty after his two-year term as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff expires in August. Presumably this means that he will be reappointed to his present post for a second two-year term.

Under the Unification Act the President is authorized to appoint a Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for two years, and the appointee is eligible for reappointment for not more than one additional two-year term. General Bradley was appointed in August 1949.

The general's statement in his new book as to his plans for remaining on active duty is dated 28 March 1951, and in it he states that publication was originally scheduled for the fall of 1951, closely following his intended retirement from active duty. However, with the outbreak of the Korean war he said he knew his retirement plans would be delayed, and he requested permission to publish his book while on active duty.

Recall Former Chief Chaplain for G-2 Mission—The Army this week issued orders recalling Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Luther D. Miller, USA-Ret., former Army Chief of Chaplains, to active duty effective 1 July to serve until 11 July. Officials reported that his assignment will be in the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, and is "confidential." Chaplain Miller, who is Canon of the Washington Cathedral, makes his home at 3811 Jenifer Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Marine "Eggbeaters" Busy—Marine helicopter pilots had their busiest day of the war one day last month, when they broke all old records, by evacuating 79 casualties from the battle line to rear area stations.

M/Sgt. Frank W. Scroggs, 25, of San Francisco, retrieved 22 casualties; 1st Lt. Joseph C. Gardiner, 29, of Waldorf, Md., rushed 21 wounded to safety; Capt. James R. O'Moore, 29, of Milwaukee, brought in 16, followed by Maj. David W. McFarland, 31, Glendale, California, with 14.

All evacuations were accomplished in Bell helicopters.

ARDC Moves to Md.—The Air Research and Development Command will be officially in Baltimore, Md., 25 June, when Maj. Gen. David M. Schlatter, USAF, moves the command post from Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, to 5 West Baltimore Street. Commanding general of ARDC since its inception in February 1950, General Schlatter has directed the command's growth to the rank of a major Air Force unit. Frequently assigned to such "ground breaking" projects, he has been reassigned to the command of the Allied Air Forces in Southern Europe under General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Succeeding General Schlatter in command of ARDC will be Lt. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, USAF, former Fifth Air Force chief in Korea. General Partridge has already returned from the Far East but it has not yet been announced when he will assume command of ARDC.

Heads Chemical Corps Board—Col. Ralph C. Benner has taken over duties as President of the Chemical Corps Board, Army Chemical Center, Md., replacing Col. H. Rowan who has been assigned as Chief of Plans, Training and Intelligence Division in Washington. Colonel Benner was formerly Chief of Personnel Division.

General Miley's Son Wounded—Notification has been received that Capt. Bud Miley, S-3 of the 1st Bn., 187th Regimental Combat Team, has been wounded in Korea. He is the son of Maj. Gen. William M. Miley, USA, Commanding General of the Army's Airborne Test Center at Ft. Bragg, N. C. Another son, Capt. Jack Miley, was also wounded in Korea while serving with the 187th RCT and is now at Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C.

SecNav to Ireland—Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews has reportedly accepted appointment as Ambassador to Ireland to become effective sometime this summer.

An informed source told THE JOURNAL that Mr. Matthews had been considering the appointment for some time prior to his decision to accept it. Recently he has had at least two visits from the Irish Ambassador to the United States, the Honorable John J. Hearne, the latest of which was on 20 June, this week. Ambassador Hearne was said to have convinced Mr. Matthews to accept the proffered post.

Previous reports that Secretary Matthews would receive the Presidential appointment have been cropping up every few months for the past year and a half. It is known that the Navy Secretary—an Irish-Catholic with deep religious convictions—eyed the assignment favorably as long ago as the Navy-Air Force controversy in the Fall of 1949. He was prevented from taking the post at that time, according to observers, only because it would give the appearance that he was being forced out of the Navy.

His changed attitude can be attributed in part to the fact that the Naval Establishment is now running smoothly, and that he enjoys a more favorable press today than he did twenty months ago. Mr. Matthews' appointment of the capable Admiral Forrest P. Sherman as Chief of Naval Operations was the key to the restoration of Navy morale, and set Navy machinery into motion which has now reached its most efficient peak since the end of the war.

The former U. S. Ambassador to Ireland, Mr. George A. Garrett, resigned last month, and reports have it that Secretary Matthews' name has already gone to the Irish capitol in Dublin where it is expected to get quick approval. President Truman is expected to announce the appointment within a matter of days.

Although no one has been mentioned to succeed Mr. Matthews, it is possible that Under Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball will be moved up to that position.

Higher Rank for Retired Officers—More than three fourths of all Marine Corps general officers retired since the end of World War II have been advanced to a higher rank than that held at time of retirement. An unofficial survey shows that of 49 Marine general officers retired since August 1945, 38 were advanced upon retirement.

Additionally, more than half of the Marine Corps colonels retired during the same period have been advanced to general officer rank. Approximately 91 colonels out of 176 retired in the past six years were so advanced.

None of the officers receive increased pay as a result of the "promotions," and the Marine Corps pointed out that, if they are recalled to active duty, "it is not necessary to recall them in their new rank." All of the officers were advanced in rank by virtue of their combat decorations or commendations.

During the four-and-one-half year period between the end of the war and 1 Jan. 1950, the Navy advanced nine vice admirals to the rank of admiral, upon retirement; 36 officers from rear admiral to vice admiral; 58 from commodore to rear admiral, and 317 captains to rear admiral. Numerous other officers have been advanced upon retirement in the subsequent 18 months in recognition of their combat records.

Separate AF Finance Functions from Army—The new Air Force Finance Center, located in Denver, Colo., under command of Col. John R. Gilchrist, which has been organizing and training both military and civilian personnel since its activation on 1 Jan., will be in full scale operation next month.

With a force of approximately 64 Air Force Officers and over 2000 civil service workers, all functions of the Air Force Finance formerly handled by the Army Finance Center in St. Louis, Mo., will be processed by the new Air Force Finance Center after completion of severance from the Army. All Air Force records are due to be transferred to Denver during this month and early July in advance of issuing over half a million AF personnel family allowance checks dated 1 Aug.

Beginning with the August checks, all Air Force dependents will receive their allotments in the future from the mile high capital, and inquiry regarding them should be addressed directly to the AFFC, 3800 York Street, Denver.

Col. Echols to Ft. Sill—Maj. Gen. A. M. Harper, USA, commanding general of the Artillery Center at Ft. Sill, Okla., announced this week that Col. Marion P. Echols, formerly Chief of Public Information under General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, has been assigned as coordinator of instruction at the Artillery School.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore the traditional wedding gown of ivory satin, en train, fashioned with a round high neck and long sleeves coming to a point over the hands. The fingertip veil of heirloom lace was held by a band of tiny white rose buds and she carried a white Bible. Her only ornament was a string of pearls brought by the groom from the Orient. Insurance protection of the United Serv-tended in future to thousands of addi-

As amended, the association's by-laws now provide that when a Reserve or with the association by taking out a policy while on extended active duty, he will be entitled to insure with the association after he is relieved from active duty, pro-

The association states that it already numbers some 100,000 officers on its in-

Hospital Corps Birthday

The Navy Hospital Corps celebrated its 53d anniversary on 17 June.

Officially established as a part of the Navy Department by legislative action on 17 June 1898, the Hospital Corps was the first Congress created staff corps in the Navy.

Four years after the Corps' establishment, it opened its first school at the Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, Va. Prior to that date Navy medical officers had been assisted by enlisted men with little or no specialized training.

During World War II, the low Navy and Marine Corps mortality rate—less than three deaths per 100 wounded—was credited in large measure to the efficiency of the corpsmen by Naval medical officers.
